INTRODUCTION

A. General Description

A guest lecture is an event where an invited individual, usually an expert in a particular field, gives a presentation or lecture to an audience at an educational institution, such as a university or school. Guest lecture activities are carried out periodically organised by the study programme in order to increase student understanding in certain matters.

Guest lectures held in the PG PAUD study programme discuss various aspects related to early childhood education. The themes chosen in this guest lecture activity are also current themes that are very interesting to be explored by students as participants. By using a diverse and interactive approach, guest lectures not only provide in-depth insight into the topics discussed, but also allow participants to be directly involved in the discussion process, exchange ideas, and ask relevant questions.

B. Purpose of Guest Lecture

Provide opportunities for students and faculty to hear new perspectives and practical experiences from experts or professionals in a particular field. This opens up new insights and enriches understanding of the topics discussed.

This activity aims to inspire students by presenting examples of success and first-hand experiences from those who have succeeded in the academic or professional world. It is expected to motivate students to pursue their goals with greater passion and conviction. Identifies the skills, knowledge and attitudes that students have successfully mastered during the study programme.

Guest lectures can be an important complement to the curriculum, providing additional explanations, real-life examples, and practical applications of concepts learnt in class. This helps students understand the relationship between theory and practice in a broader context.

By bringing in outside speakers, these activities provide opportunities for students to network with experts and professionals in their field. This can be the start of valuable professional relationships and future career opportunities.

Interactive discussions, Q&A sessions, and interaction with guest speakers can help students develop communication skills, problem-solving skills, leadership, and collaboration that are essential for success in the professional world

Guest lectures allow students to see how academic concepts are applied in practice in the field. This helps strengthen their understanding of the relevance of academic material to the real world.

CONCLUSION

Based on the results of the existing report, it can be seen that during one year the PG PAUD study programme has carried out several guest lecture activities. These results also prove that the PG PAUD study programme continues to strive to develop the quality of existing education by presenting various perspectives from various parts of the world to answer the challenges of internationalisation. That way, students can have broad insights in the field of early childhood education.
